

Fall Protection Safety Systems

Capital Safety knows that while on the job you need comfort, mobility and safety. They've designed each component of their safety systems to be fully customizable, ready to fit any size or shape. And because every safety system provides flexibility and full mobility, they make it easier to keep working productively while remaining fully protected.

With over 25 years of fall protection expertise, Capital Safety offers the broadest line of safety equipment in the industry: harnesses, shock absorbing lanyards, self-retracting lifelines, rescue and retrieval equipment, netting, and more. They engineer all safety systems to meet (and exceed) every code.

Capital Safety also has a complete line of specialty items to address unique safety concerns and provide safety solutions for challenging environments. For example, flame-resistant Kevlar® webbing harnesses and lanyards assure safety when working around flame and excessive heat. Nonsparking and nonconductive hardware offers the protection you need while working in explosive environments or when electrical conductivity is an issue.

With their total safety systems approach, Capital Safety takes fall protection to a new level. And to make sure you have total protection, each one of their five basic systems typically contains four safety components: body support, connecting component, anchorage connector and anchorage.
